TRC Presents Digicel with the Findings on its Allegedly Anti-Competitive Behaviour

31st May, 2011 – The Telecommunications Regulatory Commission (“TRC”) has today sent to Digicel its findings in the investigation into Digicel practices related to the calls within the Caribbean. This investigation concerns the alleged anti-competitive behaviour of Digicel¹ in pricing calls and termination services² to other Digicel destinations in the Caribbean. This is a confidential document which will also be issued to CCT once Digicel have reviewed commercially confidential information contained in the document.

The TRC will not be able to release the document into the public domain as it contains commercially confidential information and sets out the findings of the TRC which are not yet final. The investigation process also allows for Digicel to present its case to the TRC Board which is due to issue a final determination on the matter later in July. The TRC are unable to comment on the findings of the investigation at this point until Digicel have been given a hearing and a final decision has been made by the TRC Board. Once the final decision is made, the TRC will inform the public accordingly.

Tomas Lamanuskas, CEO of the TRC said, “the issuance of the findings marks the end of the analysis phase of the Digicel case by the investigation team. We hope that once Digicel has had the final chance to put forward their point of view, both in a written response and through a private hearing, we will be able to bring this case to a close as quickly as possible.”
